Helen Chadwick collaborated with scientists and staff at the Assisted Conception Unit of Kings College Hospital and her work features images of embryos that had been rejected for IVF implantation.

Letizia Galli's work was informed by findings in the field of neurology and explores the chemistry of the brain and the relationship between the neurotransmitter dopamine, addiction and love.

Donald Rodney's deeply personal reflection on medical science stemmed from his own long-term treatment for sickle-cell anaemia and is a meditation on the hope of science within genetic research.
