

Charlie Fox
My Head Is A Haunted House /
Dracula's Wedding

£25.00

'When I was a weird little kid in suburbia obsessed with horror of all kinds, my grandfather (who isn't alive anymore) built me a haunted house. I could pretend I was a ghost or a bat or a werewolf crying blood over a cardboard tombstone. It was a make-believe world where my imagination could get deranged and it was magic.' — Charlie Fox

Charlie Fox is one of the UK's most acclaimed young writers, having come to attention for his debut book, This Young Monster in 2017 – a collection of essays billed as 'a hallucinatory celebration of artists who raise hell, transform their bodies, anger their elders and show their audience dark, disturbing things.'

Rather than a conventional catalogue, the book takes the form of a large-scale anthology of Fox's inspirations and interests – screengrabs/VHS rips from films and TV shows, internet-sourced photos, adverts, and multiple other cultural references.

It is a purely visual 'scrapbook' offering a journey through Charlie's imagination, from horror movies (The Silence of the Lambs, and Beetlejuice, etc.) to The Simpsons, and to the funeral of Princess Diana.

Published on the occasion of the exhibitions, My Head is a Haunted House: curated by Charlie Fox at Sadie Coles HQ, London (5 June – 10 August 2019), and Dracula's Wedding at RODEO, London (4 June – 3 August 2019). Co-published with Sadie Coles HQ.

Key Selling Points

- Artists book, edition of 800.
- Charlie Fox is a writer based in London. He writes fiction and non-fiction and has written for a number of prestigious publications such as Frieze, Artforum, The New York Times, and The White Review.
- 'Charlie Fox writes about scary and fabulous monsters, but he really writes about culture, which is the monster's best and only escape. He is a dazzling writer [...] Domesticating the difficult, he invites us as his readers to become monsters as well.' — Chris Kraus (author of 'I Love Dick' on Charlie Fox's book 'This Young Monster')
